GENERAL RECORDS RETENTION SCHEDULES

Approved and Issued by the Washington State Local Records Committee SUMMER 2001

If you have any questions regarding this manual, please contact your Regional Branch Archives at http://www.secstate.wa.gov/archives/archives.asp or the Records Management staff in Olympia 360.586.4902

Note: Some records series may have been revised after summer 2001. This will be noted with a revised statement at the end of the description/function/purpose (e.g. revised 3/15/03).

The following general records retention schedules pertain to the primary copy of a record regardless of physical form. Some records are given special designations and/or disposition instructions. When indicated on the schedules the following applies:

- (1) Official Public Records (OPR) records are those identified and required by statute that documents legal actions or transactions and/or fiscally or financially obligates the law office. They have a minimum retention of six (6) years unless otherwise approved by the Local Records Committee. All other records are Office Files and Memoranda (OFM) as defined in RCW 40.14.010
- (2) Archival Records identified as being of historical value to the State. These records must not be destroyed; rather they may be transferred to the Regional branch of the State Archives serving your agency RCW 40.14.070(3).
- (3) Essential Records Records identified by the as essential for the continuity and restoration of law enforcement operations after a disaster.

Included in this manual are general schedules (listed below) pertaining to records common to LAW ENFORCEMENT agencies. These schedules include extracts from Local Government General Records Retention Schedule (LGGRRS) that are records common to all local government agencies to include Law Enforcement. The disposition authority number beginning with a "GS" can identify these. These extractions improve scheduling information and establish uniformity of universal records. The Local Records Committee considers record categories as distinct series. A description of each precedes the record series in that category and is approved as a section by the Local Records Committee.

Records Category: ADMINISTRATIVE/OPERATIONAL RECORDS

- ADMINISTRATIVE records include records from the executive level of the agency. Includes records that document the policies, procedures and administration of the agency. Most of the records created at this level are considered to be "archival" and must be transferred to the State Archives after the official retention period has been satisfied.
- OPERATIONAL may include business licenses, permits, taxes and general records created in the process, planning and carrying out the routine administrative tasks of an agency or office. Includes routine correspondence, subject files, tracking and control records, and transitory records.
- L03 applies to administrative and general operational records in paper, electronic and other formats, i.e. the following retention periods pertain to the primary copy of a record regardless of media. Retention periods for secondary copies that are produced for informational purposes only may be discarded when no longer needed unless otherwise specified.

When using this general retention schedule, records officers/coordinators should determine whether they are dealing with a primary or secondary copy the record series. General schedules are written in general titles and functions rather than identify specific individual documents or forms. Those records whose content and function are substantially the same as an item described on the schedule should be considered covered by that item. No one agency will have all of the record series listed in this general schedule. The listing of a record series does not mean that the agency must create such records.

ELECTRONIC MAIL

Electronic mail (E-mail) is primarily a communication system. Individual E-mail messages may be public records with legally mandated retention requirements, or may be information with no retention value. E-mail messages are public records when they are created or received in the transaction of public business and retained as evidence of official policies, actions, decisions or transactions. Such messages must be identified, filed and retained just like records in other formats.

Currently few E-mail systems are designed to categorize and retain information. E-mail messages with public record content should be retained in E-mail format only as long as they are being worked on or distributed. Upon completion, E-mail messages containing public record information should be printed out or transferred to an electronic document management system, filed with the appropriate record series, and retained for the minimum retention period assigned by the Local Government General Records Retention Schedule or a records retention schedule approved specifically for the agency by the Local Records Committee.

E-mail messages which are usually public records and must meet records retention requirements before being destroyed:

- Policy and Procedure Directives
- Correspondence or memoranda related to official public business
- · Agendas and minutes of meetings
- Documents relating to legal or audit issues
- Messages which document agency actions, decisions, operations and responsibilities
- Documents that initiate, authorize or complete a business transaction
- Drafts of documents that are circulated for comment or approval
- Final reports or recommendations
- Appointment calendars
- E-mail distribution lists
- Routine information requests
- Other messages sent or received that relate to the transaction of local government business

E-mail Messages Which Are Usually Administrative Materials with No Retention Value:

- Information-only copies, or extracts of documents distributed for reference or convenience, such as announcements or bulletins
- Phone message slips that do not contain information that may constitute a public record
- Copies of published materials
- Informational copies
- Preliminary drafts
- Routing slips
- Transmittals (Letters/memos)

See e-mail guidelines in the records management section of this manual.

However, in order to accommodate any smaller jurisdiction that may assume these functions, this category has been extracted from LOCAL GOVERNMENT RECORD RETENTION SCHEDULES category: Facilities Management & Hazardous Materials Administration.

Records Category: FACILITIES MANAGEMENT/HAZARDOUS MATERIALS ADMINISTRATION

- Facilities management encompasses the operation and maintenance of buildings and other facilities owned or leased by agencies of the state of Washington. Includes documentation related to building projects, fixed asset management, buildings and grounds maintenance, and space planning and allocation.
- Hazardous materials administration includes facilities reports pertaining to asbestos physical examination, summary of hazardous waste removal and hazardous materials accident/incident reports and general public safety records. Local government officials may wish to retain these records longer, possibly as long as 40 years, if the hazardous materials listed on the record include substances listed in Sub par Z, 29 CRF (Federal O.S.H.A. Regulations). In addition, if these reports document the presence of hazardous materials in a community at a given time, they should be appraised for historical significance. These records may have immediate significance for fire fighting and disaster prevention and long-term research value in situations where the hazardous materials found in the area had a significant impact on the community. However, many local agencies maintain separate files of correspondence with the Attorney General's Office, informal letter opinions, formal opinions and issue files on legal matters pertaining to the agency.
- L16 applies to Legal records in paper, electronic and other formats, i.e. the following retention periods pertain to the primary copy of a record regardless of media. Retention periods for secondary copies that are produced for informational purposes only may be discarded when no longer needed unless otherwise specified.

CRIMINAL HISTORY RECORD INFORMATION (CHRI) RETENTION GUIDELINES

The following retention schedule establishes minimum recommended retention periods for various records maintained by criminal justice agencies. These records may include documents, which are filed or kept in administrative files, case/investigative files, arrest files kept under the name of the defendant or other files that clearly are looked upon as the criminal history files of the defendant. This guideline does not pertain to jail records or files that are solely retain in jail facilities.

The "backbone" of any Law Enforcement records system, the crime file, or criminal history records information (CHRI). The committee considered several factors in computing the retention schedule, including the actual charges and convictions, the age of the defendant, and prior or subsequent convictions. Retention is computed using the established formulas. The "Year of Discharge" is defined as the "year defendant is no longer on probation/deferred sentencing or serving time". The formula categories are:

- Serious violent offenses, violent offenses, and sex offenses.
- Non violent felony charges
- Misdemeanor and Gross Misdemeanor
- Non- Conviction Data

Various source documents will be accessed for computing CHRI retention by the individual agencies. These documents may include, but are not limited to:

- Booking Sheets (when sent to arresting agency with fingerprint card)
- Arrest reports or additional documents identifying the arrest, charge and disposition.
- Citations
- Summons

- Disposition reports
- WASIS/FBI rap sheets
- Any other agency or State rap sheets

The committee recommends that an agency using another agency's rap sheet update the retention year when applicable. Thus, when the type of crime and year of discharge would cause the retention year to be greater than that originally assigned, the later year shall prevail.

In cases where misdemeanor and felonies are combined, records will reflect the longest retention. In essence, the defendant's criminal activities will determine his/her criminal history record retention with each department.

Earlier destruction can be made when it is known that the defendant is deceased or when individual requests are made through court order expungement procedures.

A disposition of "Dismissed" because of incompetence, insanity or no prosecuting witness will be considered a conviction for retention purposes only. A disposition of deferred sentence, suspended sentence, dismissed following probation or penalty assessment does not change the conviction to non-conviction. A prosecutorial deferment is NON-CONVICTION (when a final decision to dismiss or not to prosecute is made (WAC 446-20-040), whereas a sentence of deferment is a probation situation and is considered CONVICTION. The dismissal by the court simply closes the case before the court as all conditions have been met. A dismissal at the onset of the case (with or without prejudice) is a NON-CONVICTION.

CATEGORY I –	RETENTION	EXCEPTIONS
SERIES VIOLENT OFFENSES, VIOLENT OFFENSES, AND SEX OFFENSES Includes all arrest and charges for serious violent offenses, violent offenses, and sex offenses that require lifetime registration (refer to RCWs that identify these types of charges). If the charge is "attempt", the purge criteria will remain the same. These are also considered Class A offenses for which an "order to vacate" is not permitted or issued by the court.	Purge when the defendant's age is 90 and/or 25 years from date of discharge from supervision (as defined in the RCW), whichever is longer  Convicted Sex Offenders should be retained longer  -see exceptions	Exceptions to age 90:  1. May be destroyed after 25 years from date of discharge from supervision (as defined in RCW) under the following circumstances:  a. Charge is reduced to a non-violet felony (Class B or C), and  b. There is no prior or subsequent non-traffic conviction record in this state, another state, or federal court
CATEGORY II	RETENTION	EXCEPTIONS
NON VIOLENT FELONY CHARGES Includes all arrests and charges for non-violent felony charges as defined by RCW. These would include all Class B and C felonies.  For Retention period purposes, these felonies as defined by RCW will have an available sentence of more than one year in jail.	Purge when the defendant's age is 80 and/or 15 years from date of discharge from supervision (as defined in RCW) whichever is longer.  - see exceptions	1. Destroy after 15 years from date of discharge from supervision (as defined in RCW) under the following circumstances:  a. Charge is reduced to a gross or misdemeanor; and b. There are no prior or subsequent non-traffic conviction records in this state, another state, or federal court.  Note: Subjects convicted for Class B or C felony and having no prior convictions may request the Court to vacate the felony conviction if they have received a Certificate of Rehabilitation. If the Court grants the order, the record is treated as non-conviction. The RCW does not mandate that the agency destroy the record only that it must be treated as non-conviction and it's release for employment, licensing or background checks are prohibited.  Also, any conviction for DV offenses eliminates the subject from this category and moves the record to Category I. Similarly, any conviction for 3-Strikes moves the record into Category I

CATEGORY III	RETENTION	EXCEPTIONS
MISDEMEANOR AND GROSS MISDEMEANOR All misdemeanor and gross misdemeanor arrests and charges as defined in RCW or local ordinances. For retention period purposes, a misdemeanor charge carries an available sentence or fine of not more than $500 and/or not more than 90 days in the county/city jail. A gross misdemeanor carries an available sentence of more than 90 days and less than one year in the county/city jail. In this category, the entire CHRI record consists of misdemeanor or gross misdemeanor.	Purge 3 years from date of discharge from supervision (as defined by RCW or local ordinance) -see exceptions	Exceptions: Retain for 10(ten) years from date of last arrest when one of the following exceptions apply:  1. An arrest that indicates the defendant committed a crime while in possession of a dangerous weapon.  2. Defendant was considered a safety hazard to the officer or Law enforcement.  3. The entire record reveals a history of similar criminal non-traffic charges, which demonstrate a pattern of criminal conduct in the state or another state, excluding drinking offenses.  NOTE: Any conviction for DV assault or other related DV charge eliminates the subject from this category and moves the record into category II.  Examples of patterns of criminal conduct:  Pattern of assault - hindering, resisting, fighting, obstructing.  Pattern of theft - Burglary, Theft, Larceny, shoplifting.
CATEGORY IV	RETENTION	EXCEPTIONS

EDDY vs. MOORE

No. 625 - Division One - Panel 1. July 12, 1971

Harriet Eddy, Appellant, v. W. F. Moore, Respondent

Constitutional Law – Right to Privacy – Nature. The right of individual privacy is a fundamental principle having constitutional stature although not specifically enumerated in constitutional language; it is a basic freedom existing independently of specifically mentioned constitutional protections.

Constitutional Law – Right of Privacy – Criminal Arrest Records – Retention after Acquittal. Governmental maintenance of arrest records such as fingerprints and photographs constitutes a corresponding loss of individual privacy. Although such loss is generally outweighed at the time of arrest or upon conviction of a crime by the public interest in protecting society, when the arrested person is acquitted of the crime or discharged without conviction he/she has the right to the return of the arrest records in the absence of a compelling showing of necessity by the government for their retention.

Appeal from a judgement of the Superior Court for King County, No. 719736, Henry Clay Agnew, J., entered March 6, 1970. Reversed.

Action for injunctive relief. Plaintiff appeals from a judgment in favor of the defendant.

Thomas J. Isaac, for appellant.

L. Newbould and J. Roger Howell, for respondent.

Utter, J. – Harriet Eddy was arrested and charged with assault by the Seattle Police Department. After her arrest, she was fingerprinted and photographed, and the fingerprints and photographs were placed in the files of the police department. At trial, the charges against her were dismissed. She then demanded from the Chief of Police, one W. F. Moore, the return of her fingerprints and photographs. Chief Moore refused, and Mrs. Eddy sought a petition for a writ of mandate ordering him to show cause why they should not be returned. The trial court refused to issue the writ and held she had no legal right to their return.

The record on appeal is before us on an agreed statement of facts. There was, apparently, no testimony taken in the trial court. No finds of fact are contained in the agreed statement of facts, and there is, therefore, no factual data available to us to offer either any justification for retention of the prints and photographs, or to indicate to us, in fact, is the ability of the police department to keep its files and record confidential and restricted from scrutiny.

Mrs. Eddy's assignments of error are all directed to the failure of the court to recognize her right of privacy in her fingerprints and photographs, and the violation of this right by the failure of the police department to return them, without factual justification, upon her acquittal. Respondent, on the other hand, urges there is implied statutory authority for the retention of the fingerprints and photographs by the criminal identification bureau of all persons arrested for specifically enumerated crimes. He further urges that an acquitted citizen has no right to the return of photographs and that there is no legal duty requiring him to return the identification data to the appellant.

There has been a substantial body of litigation concerning photographs and files maintained by the police and efforts made to obtain their return based upon an equitable right to privacy. These cases have held the decision to release or retain arrest records was within the realm of police discretion and have justified this holding by statements that the police, in protecting society, should be granted sufficient authority to choose those things, including arrest records, which will enable them to most effectively and efficiently discharge their duty in protecting society.

The public display of an innocent person's photograph has been the exception to the general rule. Here, courts have justified their use of equitable powers in broad language:

We think that the publication of an innocent person's photograph I the roques' gallery gives rise to sufficient grounds to sustain an injunction.

There is a right in equity to protect a person from such an invasion of private rights.

Everyone who does not violate the law can insist upon being left alone...

Itzkovich v. Whitaker, 115 La. 479, 39 So. 499 (1905), affirmed in effect by Itzkovich v. Whitaker, 117 La. 708, 42 So. 228 (1906). In these display-of-photograph cases, courts expressed a sensitivity to the rights of those who had been acquitted of criminal charges. In Downs v. Swann, 111 Md. 53, 64, 73, A. 653 (1909), the court dissolved an injunction restraining the taking of photographs as the result of the failure to allege that it was the custom of police officers to display photographs, but added

We must not be understood by so doing to countenance the placing in the "rogue's gallery" of the photograph of any person, not a habitual criminal who has been arrested but not convicted on a criminal charge, ... Police officers have no right to needlessly or wantonly injure in any respect persons whom they are called upon in the course of their duty to arrest or detain,

These cases have been amalgamated into the current literature involving the development of an equitable right of privacy. This right was first delineated in the landmark article, S. Warren & L. Brandies, The Right to Privacy, 4 Harv. L. Rev. 193 (1890). In a subsequent discussion of the expansion of the doctrine, William L. Prosser, in his article on privacy, develops an analysis that would recognize four distinct kinds of invasion of four different interests of a plaintiff tied together under a common name of a right of privacy. These are:

- Intrusion upon the plaintiff's seclusion or solitude, or into his private affairs.
- Public disclosure of embarrassing private facts about the plaintiff.
- Publicity which places the plaintiff in a false light in the public eye.
- Appropriation, for the defendant's advantage, of the plaintiff's name or likeness.

Prosser does not find any intrusion into person's private affairs where police, acting within their powers, take his photographs and fingerprints or measurements. He does, however, find a violation of a right of privacy in placing one in a false light in the public eye where there is inclusion of the plaintiff's name, photograph, and fingerprints in a public "rogue's gallery" of convicted criminals when he has not, in fact, been convicted of a crime. Prosser notes, "Although the police are clearly privileged to make such a record in the first instance, and to use it for any legitimate purpose pending trial, or even after conviction, the element of false publicity in the inclusion among the convicted goes beyond the privilege.

The Washington courts have not taken a position, prior to this case, on the right of a person acquitted of a crime to the return of their fingerprints and photographs taken pursuant to arrest. In Hodgeman v. Olsen, 86 Wash. 615, 150 P. 1122 (1915), the plaintiff had been confined in the state reformatory, paroled, and then eventually granted a full pardon by the governor. After the pardon was granted, Hodgeman sought the return of his identification records held by the reformatory. The court refused to order their return and noted that where the pictures were being held as a part of the records of an institution, there was no legal duty to destroy them, in absence of a statute imposing that authority.

The court express doubts about a case where no conviction was obtained and noted: "We do not hold that any official has the implied power to take and retain the picture and measurements of persons merely accused of crime. That question is not before us."

(1) The cases dealing with the equitable right of privacy and the comment of Prosser and other commentators take us to the threshold of a recognition of a right in an individual to be free of improper use of his/her fingerprints and photographs by the state but stop short of establishing a constitutional right of privacy and grant too much discretion without need for justification, to the state to determine wheat records are needed to effectuate the law enforcement function.

In Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479, 14 L. Ed. 2d 310, 85 S. Ct. 1678 (1965), a law forbidding the dissemination of birth control information was struck down as a violation of the right to marital privacy. The court, in the majority opinion written by Mr. Justice Douglas, expanded the right or privacy beyond the limits of the enumerated protections found in the First, Second, and Fifth Amendments and gave it independent existence. The court noted, specific guarantees in the Bill of Rights have penumbras formed by emanations from those guarantees that help them give them life and substance ... Various guarantees create zones of privacy. The right of association contained in the penumbra of the First Amendment is one, as we have seen. The Third Amendment in its prohibition against the quartering of soldier "in any house" in time of peace without the consent of the owner is another facet of that privacy. The Fourth Amendment explicitly affirms the "right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures." The Fifth Amendment in its Self-Incrimination Clause enables the citizen to create a zone of privacy which government may not force him to surrender to his detriment. The Ninth Amendment provides: "The enumeration in the Constitution of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people."

The court noted in giving substance to the right that it was dealing with "a right of privacy older than the Bill of Rights" and held that a law forbidding the use of contraceptives could not stand in light of the familiar principle, "so often applied by this Court, that a 'governmental purpose to control or prevent activities constitutionally subject to state regulation may not be achieved by means which sweep unnecessarily broadly and thereby invade the area of protective freedoms." Four other judges concurred with this view.

Justice Goldberg, in a separate concurring opinion, quoting from Snyder v. Massachusetts, 291 U.S. 97. 105, 78 L. Ed. 674, 54 S. Ct. 330, 90 A.L.R. 575 (1934), stated that the due process clause protects those liberties that are "so rooted in the traditions of conscience of our people as to be ranked as fundamental" and that the Ninth Amendment "simply lends strong support to the view that the 'liberty' protected by the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments from infringement by the Federal Government of the States is not restricted to the rights specifically mentioned in the first eight amendments." Specific guidelines in the determination of what a fundamental right is were suggested by Mr. Justice Goldberg as being rooted in the ...

"traditions and collective conscience of our people" to determine whether a principle is "so rooted there ... as to be ranked as fundamental." Snyder v. Massachusetts, 291 U.S. 97, 105. The inquiry is whether a right involved "is of such a character that it cannot be denied without violating those 'fundamental principles of liberty and justice which lie at the base of all our civil and political institutions' ... "Powell v. Alabama, 287 U.S. 45, 67. "Liberty" also "gains content from the emanations of ... specific constitutional guarantees" and "from experience with the requirements of a free society." Poe v. Ullman, 367 U.S. 497, 517 ...

Griswold, 381 U.S. at 493. His opinion was concurred in by Mr. Chief Justice Warren and Mr. Justice Brennan. Mr. Justice Harlan and Mr. Justice White also wrote separate concurring opinions holding that the right of marital privacy is one of the fundamental unremunerated rights protected by the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, thus making five judges who selected the fundamental right doctrine as a ground for decision.

This doctrine has received further support since Griswold.

The development of a constitutional right of privacy in Griswold was preceded by numerous rulings of the court emphasizing the rights in areas closely allied to the right of privacy.

The rights of associational privacy, political privacy, anonymity in public expression, privacy of the body, and a right of privacy of counsel were all rights recognized by the courts prior to Griswold.

It was noted in the early case of Boyd v. United States, 115 U.S. 616, 630, 29. L. Ed. 746, 6 S. Ct. 524 (1886) that privacy was a sacred right, the court stating:

The principles laid down in this opinion affect the very essence of constitutional liberty and security. They reach farther than the concrete form of the case than before the court, with its adventitious circumstances; they apply to all invasions on the part of the government and its employees of the sanctity of a man's home and the privacies of life. It is not the breaking of his doors, and the rummaging of his drawers that constitutes the essence of the offense; but it is the invasion of his indefensible right of personal security, personal liberty, and private property; where that right has never been forfeited by his conviction of some public offense, - it is invasion of this sacred right which underlies and constitutes the essence of Lord Camden's judgement.

A recent case, subsequent to Griswold, further expands the scope of rights considered to be fundamental. Menard v. Mitchell, 328 F. Supp. 718 (D.C. 1971). Menard was arrested on suspicion of burglary, but after some incarceration was freed for lack of evidence to connect him with the crime. The California police, pursuant to state law, forwarded a record of his arrests along with a copy of his fingerprints to the FBI, where they were on file at the time of the suit. Menard instituted an action in district court to have his record expunged from the files of the FBI and argued that under California law, a person taken into custody and later released without charges having been filed is deemed to have been only detained but not arrested.

The court of appeals, in a memorandum opinion, held they were without authority to order Menard's record expunged, as determination of the legality of an arrest record should be made in the first instance, by the California court, after his administrative remedies had been exhausted. They did hold, however, that they could not limit the dissemination by the FBI of his arrest record and did so limit its dissemination to law enforcement agencies and agencies of the federal government.

(2) We here deal with the question, not ruled upon by Menard, of the legality of the existence of a record of an acquitted person's fingerprints and photographs in police files. This determination of that question, in turn, hinges directly on whether there is a constitutional right of privacy in an acquitted person's fingerprints and photographs.

There is a direct correlation between the loss of individual privacy and the retention of arrest records. This correlation was specifically noted in United States v. Kalish, 271 F. Supp. 968 (D.P.R. 1967).

Kalish was arrested for failure to submit to induction and was, pursuant to this, fingerprinted and photographed. This arrest took place in spite of the fact that he had voluntarily surrendered himself to the jurisdiction, had indicated a willingness to be inducted, and had explained that his refusal to step forward to be sworn into the army was based upon advice of counsel, who was representing him in proceedings to have his selective service classification reopened.

Kalish was fingerprinted and photographed again when he actually did voluntarily enter the service of a few days later. The charges under which Kalish was arrested were never prosecuted and Kalish brought an action seeking an order to expunge and destroy the photographs and fingerprints obtained upon his arrest.

The government resisted his motion, contending that fingerprinting and other identification was not punishment; that although burdensome, it was a burden that must be borne for the common good and that, inasmuch as Kalish's army photographs and fingerprints were on file in any event, the elimination of the judicial source of fingerprints and photographs would not completely eradicate the information. The court granted Kalish's motion and noted:

There can be no denying of the efficacy of fingerprint information, photographs, and other means of identification in the apprehension of criminal and fugitives. Law enforcement agencies must utilize all scientific data in society's never-ending battle against lawlessness and crime/ When arrested, an accused does not have a constitutional right of privacy that outweighs the necessity of protecting society and the accumulation of this data, no matter how mistaken the arrest may have been.

However, when an accused is acquitted of the crime or when he/she is discharged without conviction, no public good is accomplished by the retention of criminal identification records. On the other hand, a great imposition is placed upon the citizen. His privacy and personal dignity is invaded as long as the Justice Department retains "criminal" identification records, "criminal" arrest, fingerprints and a rogues' gallery photo.

The court answered the argument that no harm was done inasmuch as the fingerprints and photographs were already on file in army records, stating:

What the government fails to consider is the affront on the personal dignity of the individual directly related to the source of the Justice Department's identification records. At some future date, use of these records may be needed for judicial or other governmental purpose. Whatever the use, should a citizen ... be haunted by fingerprints labeled "criminal" or rogues' gallery photographs, when he has not charges pending against him? I think not. The preservation of these records constitutes an unwarranted attack upon his character and reputation and violated his right to privacy; it violates his dignity as a human being.

An individual who has been arrested and then acquitted has an undeniably greater visibility to the police than other persons do. His fingerprints, and more particularly his photograph, are available to be shown to other citizens as a potential suspect to be chosen in pre-arrest lineups, an identification procedure frequently used by law enforcement agencies. Increased police scrutiny resulting from an arrest record and its potential invasion of the individuals private life, if it occurs, should rest upon rational factors.

We no not mean to hold that the right of privacy of an acquitted person has in his fingerprints and photographs is an absolute and complete bar to their retention. The value of fingerprints and photographs of an arrested person depends upon two factors: An assumption the individual arrested did, in fact, commit the crime for which he is accused and that his commission of this crime indicated a likelihood that other crimes will be committed. An acquittal seems to negate both premises. Where the only reason for the presence of an individual's fingerprints and photographs in the police file is based upon an arrest which has subsequently been voided by an acquittal and no further justification is made for their retention of these fingerprints and photographs, no rational basis for their retention remains.

Although our state has not yet specifically recognized the existence of an independent right of privacy (Lewis v. Physicians & Dentists Credit Bureau, Inc. 27 Wn.2d 267, 272, 177 P.2d 896, 899 (1947)), we have recently noted that after Griswold, there can be little doubt that "the right of privacy is enshrined as a constitutional doctrine." State v. Rabe, 79 Wn2d 254, 267, 484 P.2d 917 (1971).

The challenge is to determine the dimensions of that right. Few things have been as basic to our legal system as the presumption of innocence, until proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. In fact, the very word acquittal is defined to mean "judicially discharged from an accusation, ...charge, or suspicion of guilt." 1A Words and Phrases 1205 (perm. Ed. 1964). Board of Comm'rs v. Johnson, 31 Ind. 463, 466 (1869); Dolloway v. Turril, 26 Wend, 383 400 (N.Y. 1841).

An arrest whether made with or without probable cause is to be sure a fact, but one that proves nothing so far as the actual conduct of the person arrested is concerned. An arrest without probable cause may still lead to conviction and one with probable cause may still result in acquittal. Under our system of criminal justice, only a conviction carries legal significance as to a person's involvement in criminal behavior.

Menard v. Mitchell, 328 F. Supp. 718 (D.C. 1971). The courts have recognized in Kalish and Menard that following acquittal, the scales of justice required the balancing on one side of the plaintiff's legitimate concern over the improper use of, labeling, or existence of his fingerprints, photographs, and arrest records against the government's bald assertion of a right to hold them. We have now reached the point where our experience with the requirements of a free society demands the existence of a right of privacy in the fingerprints and photographs of an accused who has been acquitted, to be at least placed in balance, against the claim of the state for a need of their retention.

We believe the right of an individual, absent a compelling showing of necessity by the government, to the return of his fingerprints and photographs, upon an acquittal, is a fundamental right implicit in the concept of ordered liberty and that it is as well within the penumbras of the specific guarantees of the Bill of Rights "formed by emanations from those guarantees that help give them life and substance." Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479, 484, 14 L.Ed.3d 510, 855. Ct.

It will take a compelling showing on the part of the state to justify a retention of the fingerprints and photographs. As noted in the concurring opinion by Mr. Justice Goldberg in Griswold:

In a long series of cases this Court has held that where fundamental personal liberties are involved, they may not be abridged by the States simply on a showing that a regulatory statute has some rational relationship to the effectuation of a proper state purpose. "Where there is a significant encroachment upon personal liberty, the State may prevail only upon showing a subordinate interest which is compelling, "Bates v. Little Rock, 361 U.S. 516, 524. The law must be shown "necessary and not merely rationally related, to the accomplishment of a permissible state policy." McLaughlin v. Florida, 379 U.S. 184, 196.

See ALSO Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 406, 10 L.Ed. 2d 965, 83 S. Ct. 1790 (1963); McLaughlinn v. Florida, 379 U.S. 184, 13 L. Ed. 2d 222, 85 S. Ct. 283 (1964); NAACP v. Button, 3731 U.S. 415, 438 9 L. Ed. 2d 405, 83 S. Ct. 328 (1963); Bates v. Little Rock, 361 U.S. 51, 4 L. Ed. 2d 480, 80 S. Ct. 412 (1960); Thomas v. Collins, 323 U.S. 516, 530 89 L. Ed. 430, 65 S. Ct. 315 (1945).

We do not believe requiring law enforcement agencies to show a compelling necessity for retention of fingerprints and photographs of acquitted person's places an undue burden upon them. Law enforcement agencies must now bear the burden of justifying the obtaining of a search warrant for entry into a person's home. Aguilar v. Texas, 378 U.S. 108, 12 L. Ed. 2d 723, 84 S. Ct. 1509 (1964).

The Washington statutes governing what is done with fingerprints and photographs upon acquittal of an accused are too limited in their scope. The failure to provide for return of the fingerprints and photographs upon acquittal, absent a compelling showing justifying their retention, is a constitutionally defective omission. The Seattle Police Department, having made no compelling showing justifying the need for retention, is directed to return the fingerprints and photographs to Mrs. Eddy.

The judgment is reversed.
